(57) Abstract : Abstract SALES DECISION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM USING POSSIBILITY THEORY The loss of integrity of the complex systems and the so-called island perspective is critical for IT companies. It aims to share data, apps and business processes efficiently and seamlessly into an organizational platform. The sales department is a crucial component for any company, and thus, efficiency plays a vital role in the organization's overall success. The integrity of data and performance in this unit also helps to improve the performance of the company. We are trying to devise a decision-making mechanism for the integration of sales units in this innovation. Here we propose the process in two stages. The first stage, which examines the flow of information in the form of an information flow for sales activities. In the second phase, the theory of possibility, which is a probabilistic mathematical theory in fuzzy Logic, is decided to apply the system's rules based on data from the previous step and owing to uncertainty in the data from enterprises. It ensures the knowledge and planning of events that have an influential role in the integrity of the sales department are focused on achieving its objectives. Utilize accurate organizational data and be able to objectively use the outcomes of the invention. No. of Pages : 23 No. of Claims : 4
